

WASHINGTON, D. C., SUNDAY, JANUARY 11, 1914.

Society

Gay from Now on Until Lent.

NATALIE SUMNER LINCOLN.

THE President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and the Misses Wilson are expected to reach Washington Tuesday from Pass Christian. Their arrival will be the signal for the opening of the official season in things social which has been postponed by their three weeks' absence.

They will have little rest from now until Ash Wednesday, February 25. Already every night this week is pre-empted by social engagements.

They will have just time to unpack and gather their belongings together and prepare for the reception which they give Tuesday evening in honor of the Diplomatic Corps. It is the first state reception the President has held in the White House, and the demand for invitations has been so great that it became necessary to close the list, as it had grown to such proportions.

On Wednesday the President and Mrs. Wilson will be the guests of the Vice President and Mrs. Thomas Marshall at a large dinner. On Thursday they will be entertained in like manner by the Secretary of State and Mrs. William Jennings Bryan at the first of the "Cabinet dinners." At one time it was anticipated that these series of dinners were to be discontinued and thus another precedent broken. However, it was finally decided to continue the custom, so each member of the Cabinet will give a dinner in honor of the Chief Executive and his wife. The nights picked out for these entertainments fall on Thursdays.

On Friday evening of this week the President and Mrs. Wilson will vary the program by being hosts themselves at a musicale at the White House. On Saturday other social engagements will claim their attention, and not until Sunday will they get an opportunity for undisturbed rest.

The Misses Wilson will be greatly feted on their return, as numerous entertainments, planned in their honor before their prospective departure to Pass Christian was made public, had to be curtailed.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Garrison will give a dance in their honor on February 16.

The Misses Wilson have never enjoyed a regular "Washington season," as their father was inaugurated in Lent last year, and they only saw the "little season," which always follows Easter.

Miss Eleanor Wilson attracted much attention at the opening of Mardi Gras in New Orleans last week, and was one of the most courted belles at the ball.

The past week was the gayest so far this season. It opened with the brilliant charity ball for the Children's Hospital on Monday night, and dances and dinners were given in rapid succession.

The charity ball proved an even greater success than was anticipated, and netted a large sum for the Children's Hospital.

Usually the fear of a large crush prevents women from wearing their hand-somest gowns to balls, but on Monday night, contrary to custom, many superb costumes were worn by those dancing, as well as those who sat in the boxes and watched the animated scene.

Nearly every other dance was a tango, and the only time the floor was comparatively empty was when the Marine Band broke into the strains of a forgotten waltz.

The ankle length skirts for tangoing have proved a God-send to those wise enough to wear them. The long-pointed train, while undoubtedly exceedingly stylish, has a mischievous habit of winding itself around the wearer's ankle or that of her partner, and frequently causes pride to take a tumble.

Many of the imported gowns worn by prominent Washington society matrons on Monday were designed by Worth, Paquin, and Poiret. The transparent draperies and slit skirts called forth the bon-mot now going the rounds in Paris: "The Frenchwoman covers nothing but her ears."

The mild weather has proved a great temptation to those fond of out of doors, and, while teas and receptions are well attended, many of the guests slip away and enjoy a brisk run in their motors through the country lanes before returning to their homes and dressing for dinner parties and dances.

The "Dower House" has been the scene of numerous dinner parties, followed by informal dancing. The fine old Maryland mansion lends itself to jolly entertaining, and the old-fashioned cooking which is made a specialty there, adds a novelty to tempt jaded guests and hosts, weary of the round of formal entertaining in town houses.

The Chevy Chase and Country clubs are also extremely popular, and the dinner-dances at the Army and Navy Club on Friday nights have been so successful and well attended that they will be kept up indefinitely.

Sunday entertaining has been tabooed by the members of the Cabinet and their wives, and official Washington makes a habit of strictly observing the Sabbath. It cannot be said, however, that the ultra-fashionable set have followed the example set them.

Among the notable entertainments of the past week was the dinner dance given by Mrs. Richard Townsend and Mrs. Marshall Field's delightful young people's party on Wednesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean also entertained at a dinner-dance in compliment to their house guest, Miss Mabel Gerry.

Much entertaining has also been done by the French Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand, the German Ambassador and Countess von Bernstorff, the Russian Ambassador and Mme. Bakmeteff, the Spanish Ambassador and Mme. de Riano, and the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. da Gama, all of whom are among the most hospitable hosts in Washington, and are noted for their brilliant dinners.

Dinner for Marshalls

The Vice President and Mrs. Thomas Marshall were the guests of honor at a dinner last night given by Senator and Mrs. John K. Shields at their home in the Avenue of the Presidents.

The other guests were Senator and Mrs. John Sharp Williams, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William L. Marshall, Maj. and Mrs. William Connor, and Mr. and Mrs. William F. Shields, of Knoxville, Tenn., brother and sister-in-law of the host.

Lady Cecil Spring-Rice, wife of the British Ambassador, who went to New York to attend the British ball at the Waldorf-Astoria on Friday night, has returned to Washington.

The Italian Ambassador is spending several days in New York.
